PETERBORO Museum Core™

Cotton's Place in History

While cotton's history dates back more than 7000 years it was the French who began to use cotton extensively during the 12th century. French museums display works on cotton dating as far back as the 1100's. Today, documents of historical significance and fine art prints are produced on paper made from natural cotton fiber. Pure cotton in its natural form has been unquestionably proven through the ages.

Peterboro Museum Core

Peterboro's newest line of conservation matboards is based on the legacy of cotton. This premium conservation matboard offers unsurpassed quality, permanence, and value. It has been designed for framers and conservators who insist on the centuries of proven protection that only cotton can provide.

Quality

This specially designed matboard has been uniquely constructed using only the finest materials. Peterboro Museum Core meets or exceeds all international standards for conservation matboards which provides framers and their clients peace of mind.
